An old man sat by the chimney side—
His face was wrinkled and wan—
And he leaned both hands on his stout oak cane,
As if all his work was done.

His coat was of a good old-fashioned gray,
With pockets both deep and wide,
Where his specs and tin tobacco-box
Lay snugly side by side.

The old man liked to stir the fire,
So near him the tongs were kept;
Sometimes he mused as he gazed at the coals—
Sometimes he sat and slept.

What did he see in the embers there?
Ah! pictures of other years;
And now and then they awaken smiles—
But oftener they started tears.

His good wife sat on the other side,
In the high back cane-seat chair;
You see 'neath the frill of her muslin cap
The sheen of her silvery hair.

She wears a blue checked apron now,
And is knitting a sock for him;
Her pale blue eyes have a gentle look,
And she says—"They are growing dim."

I like to call and tell the news,
And chat an hour each day,
For it stirs the blood of the old man's heart,
To hear of the world away.

Be kind unto the old, my friends,
They're worn with this world's strife,
Though bravely once perchance they fought
The battle erst with life.

They taught our youthful feet to climb
Upward life's rugged steep;
Then let us lead them gently down
To where the weary sleep.

THE HARP IN HEAVEN.—One of the sweetest recollections of my girlhood, said a lady, is a beautiful reply my mother once made me when my heart was swelling with childish grief.

I had just returned from the house of a wealthy neighbor, who had kindly given me the use of their piano for a few hours a day to gratify my extreme love for music. Our own cottage home looked so plain in contrast with the one I had just left, and no piano within its walls, I laid my head upon the table and gave vent to my overflowing heart. I felt grieved, and perhaps a little angry, that we were unable to afford the one thing I desired above all others—a piano—and expressed my feelings to my mother.

Never shall I forget her sweet gentle tone as she replied, "Never mind, daughter, if you cannot have a piano on earth, you may have a harp in heaven." Instantly the whole current of my feeling was changed. Earthly things dwindled into insignificance, and the "harp in heaven," with its golden strings, became the object of my desire. I felt reproved for my repinings against the Providence that had placed me in an humble home and from that moment the enjoyment of heaven seemed far to outweigh all the pleasures of earth. That beautiful reply has followed me all my life, or rather has gone before me like a bright guiding-star, lifting my thoughts above this transient life, and opening to my spirit's vision the glorious scenes in that "land of life and light." I have a piano now, but its charm is gone. Its music no longer gladdens my heart as it once did, for the ears that loved best to listen to its sweet tones are now enraptured with the grand harmonies of heaven. The dear fingers that so often touched its keys, now sweep the golden harp-strings. Oh, that "harp in heaven!" How my soul longs for one breath of its rich melody.

As I look upon the dear baby fingers in the cradle near me, I think it matters little whether my child be poor or rich—whether her path be strewn with thorns or flowers; if she may only have a "harp in heaven."

THERE is extant in New Haven a veteran toper, who is frequently subjected to mild attacks of mania a portu. On these occasions his eldest daughter is the only person who can manage him. Waking up one afternoon, after an attack, his throat parched and dry, he called loudly for the daughter to bring him a drink. No one answering, he bounded out of bed in a rage, strode to the balusters, screamed for Linda, and in turn for each member of his numerous family. No one came. Consigning the entire household to a doubtful region of bliss, he rushed back to the room, and seizing the first peice of furniture that met his eye, a small bureau, shoved it before him to the head of the stairs, and sent it whirling, end over end to the hall below. The crash was loud enough to bring the daughter from the kitchen, followed by the affrighted family. The inebriated head thereof was seated at the top of the stairs, elbows on knees, chin resting in hands.

"Oh, father! what is the matter?" asked the frightened daughter.

"Matter!" said the old man. "Why, here I have been a callin' and callin' for yer nigh on to half an hour, and now I've telegraphed for yer—that's all. Bring me a drink!"

NO PERSON IS WITHOUT INFLUENCE.—Some persons fall discouraged on the highway of life, because they cannot be this or that great or eminent person. Why not be willing to be themselves? No person who ever has, or ever will live, is without influence. Why not make the most of that? Since you cannot grasp that which you wish, why let what you have slip through your fingers? No person in the world is exactly like you. You have your own faults, but you have also your own excellencies individual to yourself. Give them air. Because you are not a poet, should you not be a good merchant? Because you cannot go to college, should you therefore forswear the alphabet? Because you cannot build a palace, should you not rejoice in your own humble roof, and because it is your own? Will not the sun also shine into your windows if you do not obstinately persist in shutting it out? If you cannot have a whole hot-house full of flowers, may you not have one sweet rose?

BE ON YOUR GUARD.—In company set a guard upon your tongue; in solitude upon your heart. The most ignorant have knowledge enough to discover the faults of others; the most clear-sighted are blind to their own. A great talker never wants enemies; the man of sense speaks little, and bears much. Though the ways of virtue are rough and craggy, yet they reach to Heaven.

"PATRICK, do you know the fate of the drunkard?" "Fate! Don't I stand on the most beautiful pair ye have ever seen?"

The Widowed Bride.

Loud blew the wind in the dreary month of November, when a large party were assembled around a glowing fire in the hospitable mansion of Dr. D——, late resident physician to the —— Lunatic Asylum. Music and dancing were laid aside, and all eyes were bent in eager expectation on the doctor, who held in his hand a book containing several very lovely portraits.

"Did you indeed know the original of this?" exclaimed one of the group, a beautiful girl, apparently about eighteen, splendidly attired in a robe of white satin, ornamented with pearls and orange flowers; "but how strange that black crape veil looks over that elegant wreath?"

"Yes, my dear girl, I knew her well, and hers alas! is a sad, sad tale; and now I recollect, it was twenty years ago this very day that I first became acquainted with her."

"Pray tell us how, dear Dr.——?" exclaimed half a dozen voices at once. And, thus petitioned, he commenced:

"Well then, it is just twenty years ago, this very evening, that I was aroused from a gentle slumber into which I had fallen in my easy chair, by the entrance of a servant with a note, which merely contained these words: 'Dr. D—— is entreated to loose no time in hastening to the —— Inn, to meet a patient destined for the —— Asylum, but who is now too ill to continue her journey unless it be under his care." This inn was about sixteen miles from my residence, situated on a dreary moor many miles in extent, to reach which I should have to traverse a most unfrequented road. It was therefore in no good humor that I proceeded to do the bidding of the unknown writer; for in his haste (the note had evidently been written hurriedly) he had forgotten to add his signature. The rain was descending in torrents, and the wind howled fearfully; indeed so fearful was the storm, that at first my horses refused to brave it, but by dint of spurring and flogging we at last set off. Faster and faster fell the rain, higher and higher rose the tempest, yet still we journeyed on, when suddenly the progress of the carriage was arrested, and the postillion informed me that the lights we out and he could not see a step. What was to be done? To return was useless, especially as with the numerous cross roads by which our path would be intersected, it would scarcely be possible in the dark to take the right one; and there we were, on the borders of a wide common, without a light or guide, and my servant totally ignorant of the country, having been in my service only a few weeks.

"You must trust to the horses" I exclaimed; 'I remember I baited them at this inn once, though it is a now a long time since.'

"Slowly and step by step we proceeded; now splashing through what were once mere rivulets, or at least brawling brooks, but which the floods had swollen into torrents; then coming in contact with brances of trees which the blast had riven, for the storm still raged with unabated fury, and it must have been past midnight when my servant descried a light in the distance. 'Make for it!' was my order, with what haste he could be obeyed. The light, which at first was very faint, gradually became more distinct, and at last we discovered ourselves near a cottage which my recollection told me was about five miles from my destination. As we drew near a sudden thought darted across my mind—had not dark tales of darker doings reached me about this very dwelling? I would fain have passed, but procure a light we must; there was now no help for it, and I bade my servant rouse the inmates. A few knocks, and a man's voice gruffly asked:

"'Who's there?'

"'Doctor D——,' I replied, thinking it better at once to let them know who I was: 'I am on my way to a patient, and if you will give my servant a light I shall be obliged to you, as my lamps are gone out.'

"A light was soon procured, and he bade us a surly 'Good night,' but not before I had discerned the sturdy figures of two or three ill-looking men peering at me through the half-open door. Great caution was necessary in crossing the heath, for even by daylight it was dangerous to do so; and slowly we proceeded on our dreary way. Unwilling to alarm my servant, yet feeling how necessary it was for him to be on his guard, I was just about to bid him keep a good lookout, when, amid the howling of the storm, I heard a faint whistle, and in a few seconds I heard it returned. 'Report, then, has not wronged these villians,' I mentally exclaimed, and my first step was to order the postillion to drive for his life, my next to bethink me of some weapons of defense. I had none but a case of surgical instruments which, by mere chance, I happened to have about me; but what were these against well-armed ruffians? At that instant the horses were suddenly seized, the postillion knocked off, two men presented themselves with loaded pistols, at each door of the carriage. Resistance, I saw at a glance, would be useless—nay, madness; and I felt the necessity of obeying their command to deliver my purse, when the tramp of horses' feet was heard, and the sound of voices reached us; nearer and nearer they came; and my assailants fearful, (for conscience makes cowards of us all,) hurried off, and left me to the mercy of the new comers. Fortunately they proved to be two persons sent from the inn to expedite my arrival, as from the delay, they feared that some accident had occurred or that I had lost my way. Under their guidance I soon reached the inn, and was met at the door by a venerable old man, whose silver locks floated in the cold night wind, and whose furrowed cheek was coursed by may a tear.

"'My child! oh! save my child!' broke from his trembling lips, as, with a convulsive grasp he seized my hand, and hurrying me into the house threw open the door of a small room, where, reclining on a sofa, was a being beautiful as thought. Her jet black tresses were scattered in rich profusion over the humble pillow which supported her death-like form; and though the pallor of death cast its marble hue over her countenance, naught could surpass its loveliness.

"Save, oh! save my child!' again and again groaned the old man, 'and I will bless you; give me back my loved, my only one.'

"But there she lay, motionless, apparently lifeless; and in answer to my queries I learned that she had been in that state for nearly twelve hours. At first they thought she had fainted, but, as the usual remedies had been resorted to without effect, it was deemed desirable that I should be sent for. An elderly female attendant, who replied to my questions, watched with great anxiety my countenance as I examined the pulse of my patient, and by a sign gave me to understand that she had something to communicate. An opportunity soon presented itself, and she informed me with great emotion that the mind of her young lady was affected. 'Yet he cannot believe it,' she said; 'and it is only through the solicitations of his friends, and at the urgent request of her medical attendants, that her father has consented to her being removed from home. Every doctor in London, of any skill, has been consulted, and all say that the —— Asylum is the only place for her. It has cost my master many thousands, and I'm sure he would not mind as many more could Miss Lucy—I mean Mrs. Ventnor—recover.'

"'Mrs. Ventnor!' I exclaimed, 'surely she is not married? so young, too, poor girl!'

"'Yes, sir," said the old nurse, 'she is very young, hardly nineteen; and she was not eighteen when she was married.'

"'But how came this dreadful calamity to befall her?' I asked; 'not ill-treatment, I hope?'

"'Oh, no! doctor, for he loved the ground she walked on; but he died suddenly the day they were married, and her brain has been turned ever since.'

"Here our conversation was interrupted by the frequent repetition of my name, and I hastened to return to the room which I had left and soon perceived the cause of the summons in the altered appearance of my patient. A slight flush tinged her cheek, and she sighed heavily; and though no ray of intelligence beamed from the half-open eye, still any change was better than the lethargic state in which she had so long lain.

"'She lives! she breathes!" exclaimed the doting father. 'Lucy, my hope, my pride, the solace of my old age, speak to me one word, only one, to bless and cheer me!' and the old man sank on his knees and sobbed like a child.

"After a short interval I considered it advisable that the invalid should reach her resting-place as soon as possible, and, accordingly, we commenced our journey homeward. Pitying the distress of Mr. Beverton, I requested him to become my guest for a few days, until he had, in some little measure, overcome his reluctance to leave his daughter with strangers. For the first few days Lucy lay in an unconscious state, heeding nothing, and seeming ignorant of any chance in the person or things around her; but by degrees her accustomed wildness of manner returned, and on paying my usual morning visit, I one day found her arrayed exactly as described in this portrait, 'with a cheek as hueless as the flowers that bound her raven hair.' A white satin robe fell in massy folds around her perfect figure. It was her bridal dress; and yet as if, even in her madness, a gleam of sad truth had burst forth, she had thrown a widow's veil over her wreath of orange flowers.

"'See, see!' she wispered, in a mysterious manner, 'this is my wedding-day, and this,' extending her finger on which she wore a plain wedding-ring, 'is his gift; my own Charles placed it there;' and kissing it fondly, we shall never, never part. Is not this beautiful?' she continued, drawing from her bosom a silken bag which contained a small piece of paper, from which she read, in a low, sweet tone, the following lines:

"'There's not a word thy lip hath breathed,
That is not shrined within my heart
Like to a dream of Heaven.
There's not a spot where we have met,
A fav'rite flower or tree;
There's not a scene by thee beloved
That is not prized by me.

"'When'er I hear the linnet's song,
Or the blithe woodlark's lay,
Or mark upon the golden west
The rosy clouds decay;
When'er I catch the breath of flowers
Or music from the tree,
Thought wings her way to distant bowers,
And memory clings to thee.'

"As she concluded these beautiful lines, rendered still more touching by her impassioned manner, she paused, and a shade of sadness flitted over her lovely face; then uttering a fearful shriek, which the lapse of years has not effaced from my recollection, she seized my arm and screamed forth in accents of terror:

"They shall not tear thee from me! I will cling to thee while I have life! Charles! Charles! do you not hear me? 'Tis Lucy, thy own Lucy, who calls thee and bids thee stay. See! see! They mock at my despair! fiends, devils, furies, all the powers of earth shall not wrest him from me! Father! father! help! for God's sake, help!"

"For hours after this sad scene the unfortunate girl lay in the same state as when I first saw her. Vainly did I resort to every possible restorative, and I indeed feared that the bruised and wounded spirit had quitted its earthly abode; but it was not so. Slowly and sadly the long hours of that dreary night wore on, and the solemn stillness was broken only by the sobs of the poor old man, watching with a parent's love for the slightest ray of hope; but as the gray dawn appeared, poor Lucy gave some signs of returning life; and at last she murmured forth some indistinct words. Having again successfully administered further restoratives, I left her to the care of her nurse, enjoining quietude, and promising to see her again in two hours. As I approached her chamber, the full, rich, mellow tones of a female voice burst on my ear, now swelling to its fullest extent, now dying on my entranced senses with an unearthly sweetness. Oh! never, never had I heard so wild, so sweet a strain. The words—for as I drew near I could distinguish them—were these:

"'They bid me forget thee, they tell me that now
The grave damp is staining that beautiful brow;
But thy gay laugh returns in the silence of sleep,
And I start from my slumbers to listen and weep.

"'Doctor, doctor,' eagerly exclaimed the father, as I gently opened the door, 'there is hope—I see, I feel there is hope—for she weeps.'

"And so it was; her own sad, sweet melody had opened the flood-gates of her grief, and she wept long and violently; indeed, so unrestrained was her emotion that I dreaded its effects on her delicate frame.

"'Father! dear father!' she at last said, in a low, faint voice, 'come nearer, closer, yet closer. Where am I, father? not in my own loved home? Father! dear father! tell me.'

"The old man struggled to repress his emotion (for I whispered—'Be calm, for God's sake be calm! any excitement will destroy her,') and said:

"'You are with your friends dearest, with those who love and cherish you; compose yourself, my own one. You have been ill, very ill; but the Almighty has heard my prayers and restored you to me.'

"'Oh, father! I have had a fearful dream. I thought it was my bridal-day, and that leaning on your arm, I stood before the altar. Charles too, was there; and when I gave him my hand his hand was cold, icy cold; and when he should have spoken, his lips were motionless; and there, standing by his side, was a skeleton form, which wound its arms around him and bore him from me. Oh! so fearful was it, that now, even now, I can scarcely doubts its dreadful reality.'

"At that moment her eye fell on her strange attire—the black veil falling in folds over her snowy dress, and the bridal token glittering on her finger—then, with a piercing shriek, which rose higher and higher till it ended in the yell of a maniac, she fell senseless in the outstretched arms of her father. Life was indeed extinct, and her pure spirit had taken its everlasting flight; the silver cord, which had been too highly strung, had snapped in twain, and the Widowed Bride lay motionless and dead.

"Would that I had been spared the sight of that old man's grief; there he knelt supporting the lifeless form of his only child. His whole frame shook with emotion, and the cold drops of agony burst from every pore.

"'My child! my child!' at length he groaned; 'my pride, my joy, the bright star of my existence, my beautiful, my true, would that I had died for the, my child, my child!'

"His voice grew fainter and fainter, his grasp grew less firm, the eyes became fixed. I looked; he was dead! Yes, they who had loved so well and truly in life, in death were not separated. They sleep together in the family vault in —— Church, and this simple inscription alone marks her monument—'THE WIDOWED BRIDE.'"

THE editor of the Louisville Journal says if he possessed the most valuable things in the world, and was about to will them away, the following would be his plan for distribution:

I would give the world truth and friendship, which are so very scarce.

I would also give an additional portion of truth to lawyers and merchants.

I would give to physicians skill and learning.

I would give to printers their pay.

To gossiping women, good sense, modesty, large waists and natural teeth.

To young sports and dandies, common sense, little cash and hard labor.

To old maids, good tempers, smooth faces, little talk and good husbands.

To old bachelors, love for virtue, children and wives.

TORTURED TO DEATH.—A small party of white men, who were out on a hunting expedition in the mountains bordering on Honey Lake Valley last week, says the Butte Record, came upon a Piute encampment, and found the heathen preparing to put several Goose Lake Indians to death. The whites interceded for the lives of the prisoners, but the Piutes said they would fight before giving them up. By bribes they were induced to part with one little Indian girl, who was brought into Virginia City by the party. The other captives were tortured to death and their bodies burned.

NEVER OUTLAWS.—The Downeville Messenger gives the following information:

By a law of Congress for the encouragement of publishers, the proprietor of a newspaper is permitted to continue sending his paper to his subscribers, who are in arrears, (whether they take it from the postoffice or not), and collect pay for the same up to the time of settlement. Nor does the amount against a delinquent outlaw by the statute of limitation, as do other debts. In consequence of this, it is plain that no debtor for a newspaper can ever enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

THE crew of a man-of-war once saw a comet, and were somewhat alarmed and surprised at its appearance. The hands met and appointed a committee to wait on the commander to ask his opinion of it. They approached him, and said: "We want to ask your opinion your Honor." "Well, my boys, what is it about?" "We want to inquire about that thing up there." "Now, before I answer you, first let me know what you think it is." "Well, your Honor, we have talked it over, and we think it is a star sprung a leak."

UMBRELLAS.—There is no need of buying umbrellas—they can easily be procured without—thusly: Take your stand in a doorway on a rainy day. As soon as you see a man with a nice umbrella, step out and say to him, "Sir, I beg your pardon, but you have my umbrella!" Nine times in ten he will surrender it at once, for how does he know it was not you he stole it from?

MORAL BEAUTY, the reflection of the soul in the countenance, is as superior to superficial comeliness as mind is to matter. Those who look good cannot fail to be good-looking.

IT is said that the Duke of Newcastle recently expressed his regret that the Prince of Wales had not been drowned on his way home from this country.

"I DO not say," remarked Mrs. Brown, "that Jones is a thief; but I do say that if his farm joined mine, I would not try to keep sheep."

THE Menkin is going to write the history of her husband. Perhaps Brigham Young will favor us with a biography of his wife.

THE plainer the dress, greater lustre does beauty appear. Virtue is the greatest ornament, and good sense the best equipage.

A LITTLE girl in Bangor, one Sunday, astonished her Sunday school teacher with, "Blessed are the dressmakers."

NOTHING so adorns the face as cheerfulness; when the heart is in flower, its bloom and beauty pass to the features.

WHY is a turkey standing on a fence like a silver half dollar? Because there is a head on one side and a tail on the other.

YOLO COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

SATURDAY, : : : : MARCH 21, 1868.

THE BRIDGE MATTER.—The recent action of joint meetings, in Sacramento, of the Boards of Supervisors of Yolo and Sacramento counties, in reference to the proposed purchase of the Sacramento and Yolo bridge, has given rise to much discussion on the subject in this county. As we have several times expressed our opinion in regard to the propriety of making the purchase, we only propose at the present time to lay before our readers a copy of a remonstrance against such proceeding, which is being circulated and signed by many citizens, and which seems, by its ready endorsement, to reflect the sentiments of a great majority of the tax-payers of Yolo county. The following is a copy of the remonstrance:

To the Honorable the Senate and Assembly of the State of California:

WHEREAS, It has come to the knowledge of the undersigned that a joint meeting or meetings of the Boards of Supervisors of Sacramento and Yolo counties have been held, having under consideration the propriety of purchasing the bridge across the Sacramento river, connecting the town of Washington, in Yolo county, with Sacramento city, and soliciting such legislation by your honorable bodies as should enable them to make such purchase and tax the people of said counties for the payment of the same; and, whereas, we believe the sentiment of a large majority of the tax-payers of Yolo county is adverse to making such purchase and to such legislation, now, therefore, we, citizens and tax-payers of Yolo county, respectfully remonmonstrate against any legislation by your honorable bodies whereby the Board of Supervisors or any other persons should be allowed to create any liabilities in the purchase of said bridge, to be either directly or indirectly liquidated by taxing the people of Yolo county.

WANTED, AN EMPIRE.—As we look forth into the future of the United States, we behold its beloved flag waving over an empire ample enough, in its present dimensions, to hold a hundred and fifty millions of people, presided over by a Government now lifted into a degree of power proportionate to its future responsibilities.—[Putman's Magazine.

More power is just what Radicals are praying for. Their programme is to invest Military Satraps with sufficient authority to enrich themselves from the pockets of a tax-ridden people, and crush out the right to liberty and the pursuit of happiness by means of negro votes and bayonets.

THE WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.—Work in the matter of grading this road was recommenced on Tuesday last, and is progressing rapidly. The camp nearest the initial point at Brighton, will, should the weather prove favorable, be compelled to move between five and six miles, on Monday or Tuesday next, towards Stockton. We have no report of the operations of other camps, but they have been actively at work, and the work is steadily and rapidly progressing.—[Capital Reporter, 20th inst.

SOME of the Democratic papers have already commenced ridiculing Grant, because he was a tanner, all of which is true, and they will find before next November, that he still understands the business to perfection.—[Exchange.

No doubt of his proficiency in that business. A majority of the people will not be at all surprised to see him hide his own head next November, and the Radicals are expected to produce a good deal of bark about that time.

SOME of the Democratic journals in California have pronounced in favor of Haight for President!—[Exchange.

SOME of them have become so arrogant over their late success, that we would not be surprised if they propose to run the entire General Government.—[Amador Ledger.

They only propose to demand of those who are already running it to ruin, to "pass in their checks."

THE EQUINOCTIAL STORM.—Weather which would be creditable to a bad winter continues, and we see no signs of abatement. If bad weather is sent upon us for our wickedness our sins must have been great.—[Appeal.

Guilty conscience, etc. There has been another reign sent upon us worse in its effects than the weather. But the ides of November will place the reins in better hands.

WHO STOLE IT?—A keg of whisky was stolen from the Powder Co's Ware House, at the landing, last week. Any man that will steal a keg of whisky ought to be sent to the Legislature.—[Santa Cruz Times.

Perhaps one of A. J.'s agents happened to pass that way.—[Ledger.

No, it was B. F. B. who took it to Washington to let his friend Ben. Wade in.

OUR STOCKRAISERS' MOTTO.—

"No pent up fields contract our powers,
The whole boundless domain is ours."

Not so; the honest farmer speeds his thrifty plow
While the whistling plowboy corrals the wandering cow.

ANANIAS B. KNOTT has obtained a divorce from his wife in St. Louis, on the ground of "cruel and abusive treatment." He was Knott, her husband, and she was Knott, his wife. Now she is not; that is to say, she is not Knott; and he is divorced, still he is Knott. Why not?

A FEW days since, an old gentleman in Missouri, where the drouth has been severe, and who has been hauling water for the last three months, on being asked by an acquaintance if he thought it would rain, remarked: "I hope not, for if it does it will spoil the roads so I cannot haul water."

I.O.O.F.—In various parts of the State considerable preparation is being made for the coming anniversary of the institution of Odd Fellowship in the United States.

THANKS.—Hon. J. A. Johnson, M. C., and Hon. John Henry, of Illinois, will accept our thanks for valuable State papers.

EX-GOVERNOR WELLER addressed a Democratic mass meeting at the St. Charles Theater, New Orleans, on the 15th of February.

Prepare for Action.

As the time approaches when it will be necessary to open the campaign and marshal the forces of the Democratic party against the unscrupulous foes of Constitutional Liberty, no work should be left undone; no apathy should be indulged in; no exertions should be spared in one harmonious, final struggle to rid the country of its impending ruin, and the people of their oppressors. The immoderate and haughty tone, the inconsiderate and reckless course, and the alarming excesses of those who were chosen as servants of the people, but who have become tyrannical masters, must be met by the firm, cool, and determined judgement of a thorough organization, based on exalted principles grounded in earnest devotion to the best interests of the whole country.

It is not sufficient alone that clubs have been organized throughout the country—as in our own county, for instance—where earnest, resolute Democrats have done much to add vigor to the hope of final victory, by uniting their energies in the beginning of the contest. It is not enough that resolutions have been passed, expressive of the hope and confidence of the people in the result of the momentous struggle upon which so much depends the future peace and prosperity of the Union, or condemnatory of the acts of a corrupt Congress in its wicked endeavor to crush out every principle of self-government which distinguishes a free people. It is not enough that we declare opposition to negro suffrage, and other dogmas of insane fanatics, or declaim against the base usurpations of the party in power. There is other work to be done; active, earnest work, in the broad field in which our forces are stationed. Every part of party machinery must be kept in order—be prepared at all times to perform its respective duties. While the rank and file are organizing and sustaining clubs, our leaders and Committees must not be negligent of their duties in co-operating with them in a concentration of forces and the accomplishment of all requisites of united action, having in view the great end to be attained. In this connection let it not be forgotten that the Democratic State Central Committee has called a State Convention to be held on the 29th of next month. Gentlemen of the County Committee, in this action of the State Central Committee there is involved a duty for you to perform. Prompt and energetic action on your part, at this time, will be the means of accomplishing much good. Every patriot should stand shoulder to shoulder in this hour of trial until the bugle of victory sends dismay to the hearts of the cravens who trample under foot the Constitution of our fathers.

As this offer is better than any I have received, I think it would be well for Trustees to purchase through Mr. Woods. Those who wish to avail themselves of this offer, will please forward to me a list of such books as they wish; or, if Trustees prefer, Mr. W. or myself will make the selections, in which case it will only be necessary for Trustees to forward last year's bills so that books like those already in the Libraries will not be purchased again. TOWN AND COUNTY MATTERS.

LUCIA CUPPY'S LECTURES.—Mrs. Cuppy appeared for the first time before a Woodland audience on Tuesday evening last. The subject of her lecture on that occasion was "Education" which, although deemed a "threadbare subject," was handled by the fair speaker in a manner that won for her the respect and applause of her hearers. She took for her subject on Wednesday evening "The Worship of one Idea." The speaker advocated a reform of the tendency to the worship of one idea; she would however be very unwilling to ignore the good accomplished by those who advocate one branch of reform to the exclusion of all others. Zeal and earnestness in a good cause were capable of accomplishing much for the advancement of mankind, but she had noticed that persons who devote themselves to the exclusive consideration of one branch of reform, were very apt to become intolerant in regard to the views of their neighbors, and intolerant to that symmetry which is so desirable—breadth of thought and catholicity of spirit—and which teaches us not to despise the least atom flying through space as beneath notice. "From very many apparently insignificant facts have been derived important information which has resulted in a benefit and blessing to mankind. In almost every instance great truths have been made manifest through the medium of insignificant channels." In support of this she referred to the solution of the law of gravitation, and the application of steam as a motive power. She believed that it is a part of the duties of all organizations of reform to give a due consideration to everything that is calculated to benefit mankind. Physical health, as well as religious health, must be attended to. She regarded the bodies that we occupy as the temples that enshrine the active mind; it is very necessary then, that these outer temples that enshrine the soul and spirit of man should be kept in a healthy condition, because it is utterly impossible for the mind to act in an unhealthy organization. She alluded to temperance as a beautiful link in the chain of reform, and exhorted those who were engaged in restoring victims of intoxication, to peace and happiness, to continue in the good work, but at the same time she would have them regard temperance as but one plank in their platform, from which they should look out and abroad upon other fields of labor. Other vices, equally as dangerous to the young as intemperance, must be met by the earnest labor of reform. To restore the victim of gambling was a work of as much importance as that of reforming the drunkard. The lecturess referred to other vices and follies of the day, and in treating upon "Woman's Rights" she elicited the applause of her audience by premising that in order that the influence of true womanhood should be felt and appreciated, it was not necessary that she should be invested with the right of suffrage, or take active part in the political world. She thought the country would be safe in the hands of its statesmen if the responsibilities of educated mothers were attended to in their capacities as teachers of the young. The lecture, of which, for want of room, we have been able to give but an imperfect idea, was delivered in a pleasing yet dignified and forcible manner, and was listened to thoughout with interest and attention. A third lecture was delivered by Mrs. Cuppy on Thursday evening, subject, "The inspiration of the Bible and the inspiration of the present," of which we may speak in our next issue.

RESOLUTIONS.—At a regular meeting of the Knight's Landing Democratic Club, held on Saturday, 14th inst., the following resolutions were passed unanimously: "Resolved, That in the dispensation of Providence in removing from among us the Hon. H. H. Hartley, the community has sustained an irreparable loss, the State has lost an honorable, high-minded gentleman and citizen, and Yolo county a sincere and warm advocate of her interests. Resolved, That in the intimate connection of this community with the deceased, during his residence among us as a citizen of our county, and while he enjoyed an honorable and exhalted position in the gift of the people, as well as in the frequent opportunities subsequently afforded of friendly intercourse with him, we have ever found him possessed of a noble mind and generous heart, and in his loss we bow in our affliction with deep sorrow. Resolved, That the members of Knight's Landing Democratic Club sympathize with the friends and relatives of the deceased, and in their unfeigned sorrow feel that the Supreme Ruler has laid his hand of affliction heavily upon us. Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the YOLO COUNTY DEMOCRAT."

ELOPEMENT.—In the "wee sma hours of the morning" of the 17th inst., at Buckeye, the "Old Folks at home" were startled by the sudden disappearance of the "flower of the family." After eager search and dilligent inquiry, it was ascertained that the loving heart, accompanied by a confiding lover, had only started out on a pleasure visit to the kind parson of a neighboring village, who, in holy bond hastily taught a blushing bride to R–Ely on golden promises, and instructed the adventurous groom in the true value of a genuine coin, whose Silver tones would make merry the happy union. There will be no prosecution for taking away of Silver, for Richard has promised to produce regular installments of interest, in fac simile, of the original.

NOVEL RACE.—We learn that a race is to come off at Cottonwood, to-day, between two dogs that have been training for the purpose, for some time past. The dogs, "Wallace" and "Black Rascal," are to have an even start after a hare—numbers of which abound on the plains in that vicinity—and the race is to be decided in favor of the one that picks up the running prize. The stakes are $20 a side.

MAY-DAY BALL.—We learn that the Odd Fellows and Masons contemplate building a magnificent Hall, in this place, for the use of both Orders. On the evening of the first of May next a grand ball will be given at "Temperance Hall" for the benefit of the building fund—of which notice will be found in another column.

LOST.—Near the Photograph gallery, or between there and Gray & Freeman's store, a small gold chain, valued as the gift of a deceased friend. The finder will please return it to Dr. Pierson, or leave it at this office.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB.—There will be a meeting of the Woodland Democratic Club at the Court House, on Monday evening, 23d inst. Eminent speakers are expected to be present.

PAPERS.—Our thanks are due to B. M. Fleishman, of the firm of Fleishman & Kaufman, for many valuable papers just received from him through the Post Office.

SPRING TRADE.—Since the favorable change in the weather, quite a lively preparation is being made by Woodland merchants, to meet the demands of the spring trade, which promises to be unusually active. Among others we are pleased to note, particularly, the unceasing industry of Fleishman & Kaufman, in their efforts to meet the wants of their patrons by enlarging and rendering more convenient their attractive establishment. This firm has done much to add wealth and ornament to the town, and we dare say they are justly entitled to the generous support they are receiving at the hands of the citizens of Yolo. The constant shipments of goods consigned to them from the east, as well as their daily transactions in produce and merchandise of all kinds, give to their establishment an air of business activity scarcely excelled by many wholesale and retail establishments of San Francisco.

THE WEATHER.—During the past week the weather has been warm and pleasant, causing grain to grow rapidly and giving new life to business.

FLEISHMAN & KAUFMAN.—This firm believe in the utility of advertising. See their new column in to-day's paper.

QUARTERLY REPORT.—The Auditor's and Treasurer's report will be found in another column.

YOLO COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

Home Affections.

I've gazed on many a lovely scene,
Of sunny skies and vales of green,
And mountain heights sublime,
But far more lovely, far more fair
Is happy homes with loved ones there—
That's loveller, divine!

Morning may clothe in golden ray,
And gushing fountains sweetly play,
And nature smiling fair—
I'd rather have a wish in heart
For "home affections," they impart
Pure joy that's found but there.

Sweet, happy home, where love entwines
Her sweet heart's ease 'mid cares of thine,
And dwells with thee forever;
Sweeter than skies of brightest hue
Are hearts that love us fond and true,
That nought but death can sever.

DARN 'EM.—An editor down East, says: "A female correspondent sends us an interesting peice of poetry, and requests us to publish it. The moon is called bright; the stars are flattered with the original appellation of 'meek-eyed;' the trees come in for a full share of eulogy; and the falling spring is pronounced 'silver-plated,' or something to that effect. Besides, the poem is equally instructive on other subjects. If Mary sends us an affidavit that she has washed her dishes, mended her hose, the week after she was struck with poetic fire, we will give in, and startle the literary world from its lethargy. For the present we say, 'darn your stockings, and darn your poetry, too.'"

A "NOATIS."—A traveler in Arkansas found the following notice stuck on the ferryman's door at Cache river: "Noatis.—Ef any body cums here arter licker or to get akross the River, They can ges blow thiz here horn, and ef I don't cum when my Betsy up at the House heres the Horn bloin shele cum down and sell the licker or set em Akross the river ime away from Hoem john willon NB them that cant rede will hav to go to the hose arter Betsy tant but half a mile thar."

MUST STEP SOMEWHERE.—A gentleman visiting a neighbor, found him disabled from having a horse step on his foot. Hobbling out of the stable, the sufferer explained how it had happened. "I was standing here," said he, "and the horse brought his foot right down on mine." Our friend looked at the injured member, which was the No. 14 pattern, and said very quietly: "Well, the horse must step somewhere."

A GENTLEMAN was chiding his son for staying out late at nights—or, rather, early of next morning—and said: "Why, when I was of your age, my father would not allow me to go out of the house after dark!" "Then you had a deuce of a father—you had!" sneered the young profligate. Whereupon the father very rashly vociferated: "I had a confounded sight better 'n than you, you young rascal."

"THAT is probably the oldest piece of furniture in America," said a collector of antique curiosities to a friend, pointing to a venerable looking table as he spoke. "How old is it?" asked the friend. "Nearly four hundred years." "Pshaw, that's nothing—I have an Arabic table over two thousand years old." "Indeed!" "Yes; the multiplication table!"

ECONOMY.—The father of an interesting family residing near Detroit, not long since stopped the only newspaper which he had ever allowed himself or family, and solely on the ground that he could not afford the expense. This man chews up fourteen dollars and sixty cents' worth of tobacco every year.

THE new Colt armory at Hartford is 500 feet long by sixty wide, is surmounted by a roof frame of wrought-iron, and a magnificent dome. It is four stories high, has 550 windows and thirty-seven miles of heating, gas and water pipes. The motive power is given by four vertical steam engines.

WITH a true wife, a husband's faults should be secret. A woman forgets when she condescends to that refuge of weakness, a female confidant. A wife's bosom should be the tomb of her husband's failings, and his character far more valuable, in her estimation, than life.

A GENTLEMAN who takes common sense views of things, being recently asked his opinion of a poetic individual, replied, "Oh, he is one of those men who have soarings after the infinite, and divings after the unfathomable, but who never pay cash."

THERE's our grandmother, says a cotemporary, striking instance why women should vote. She's paid taxes on a dog for the last ten years, and now declares she won't stand it any longer—she'll either vote or kill the dog.

A PARISIAN left directions before his death that a copy of one of the morning newspapers should be placed on his tomb every day. The eccentric request is duly carried out, and there on his grave may be seen a heap of musty old papers.

IN 1700 there were 18,000,000 Catholics in France. In 1800 the census taken by order of the First Consul showed the number to be 26,000,000. The last census shows the present number to be 36,000,000.

A LETTER safely reached its destination in Iowa, with this indorsement: "There is a ten dollar bill folded in this letter, and if you want it worse than my mother does, take it."

ESCAPED.—A Paris actress fell near the foolights; but escaped injury from the circumstance that she had nothing on which could take fire.

"EXCUSE me, madam, but I would like to ask why you look at me so savagely?" "Oh! I beg pardon sir; I took you for my husband."

BETTER.—Jones thinks that instead of giving credit to whom credit is due, the cash had better be paid.

WHY are good resolutions like fainting ladies? They want carrying out.

Delegates to the Conventon will be elected in conformity with the following apportionment, based upon the vote cast for Hon. Henry H. Haight for Governor, giving one Delegate for each County, one for each two hundred Democratic votes, and one for each additional one hundred votes or over.

The following test for qualification to participate in the election of Delegates, was adopted:

All voters opposed to the Radical policy of Congress, to Negro or Chinese suffrage, and in favor of a Constitutional administration of the Government of the whole Union, shall be entitled to vote for Delegates.

The Central Committee urgently request the different County Committees of the Democratic Party to call their County Conventions for the election of Delegates at as early a date as possible, and to forward to Thos. N. Cazneau, Secretary of the State Central Committee, at the Rooms of the Committee, 321 California street, a full list of their County Committees, officers and members.

The following was unanimously adopted by the Central Committee, and directed to be published for the acceptance of County Committees:

Resolved, That it is recommended to the County Committees that, in their calls for County Conventions, the Delegates elected to the State Convention constitute Congressional Conventions, to meet at the same time and place, to nominate candidates for Congress for their respective Districts, if such are to be elected, and to appoint District Committees for each Congressional District.

The State Central Committee deem it eminently proper that, in the discharge of their duties to the great majority of the people of the State of California, who are united under the time-honored political organization which the Committee represent, as well as to the great Conservative masses of our people, to express their sentiments upon the momentous issues now threatening the stability of our Government, and have unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Radical majority in Congress, instead of seeking to lighten the burdens of taxation, disregarding both the will of the people and their official oaths in an unnatural pursuit after Negro Equality, having been laboring to usurp the functions of the Executive, degrade the Judiciary, and after committing the indecency of forcing upon the President a Cabinet officer personally offensive to him, and making a military subordinate independent of the orders of the President, thus uniting in their own hands the purse and the sword, they have for the first time presented to the world the disgraceful spectacle of an American President arraigned by a party vote, avowedly for party purposes, before a Senate, more than two thirds of which is composed of his political opponents, and placed on trial for no crime except that of having endeavored to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States and the liberties of the people; that in these proceedings the Radical party in Congress have been manifestly actuated by a desire to perpetuate themselves in office, and merit the unqualified condemnation of all good citizens, without distinction of party.

Resolved, That this Committee view with sincere alarm the revolutionary action of the Radical majority in Congress, condemned in the foregoing resolution, believing the same calculated to create wide-spread distrust, and seriously derange the other great interests of the country.

The State Central Committe desire to impress upon the Democratic and Conservative voters of the State the necessity of assembling in their various localities, to form Clubs, and to take active measures for the approaching political campaign that the rights of the people may be preserved, the Constitution upheld, and the Union again united.

By order of the Democratic State Central Committee. J. P. HOGE, President.
THOS. N. CAZNEAU, Secretary.

Fifteen Years Monopoly!
The subscriber offers for sale the right to put down T. S. Lewis'
PATENT TUBE WELLS,
in the several unsold county rights in this State, to wit: Yolo, San Joaquin and Sacramento counties. By the use of this Tube, a Well is obtained at less than one-tenth the labor of digging. The Wells are permanent, convenient, require no cleaning, and will endure for ages without cost for repairs.
Any man with the will and strength to wield a sledge-hammer, can, unaided, make from $10 to $60 per day, every day he may labor, at putting down these wells, and have a county monopoly for fifteen years and three months. The patent was issued in May last, as an improvement on all Tubed Wells. In nine months' time it has been introduced, and is now in use in every State in the Union, excepting Nevada and Oregon. The Well can be seen and tested in this city.
For particulars, call on the subscriber, corner of 8th and Brannan streets, San Francisco, or address through post-office.
